Trip to Skardu

Oct 3, 2025

The mountains were breathtaking today. I've never seen anything quite like it before. The journey to Skardu was long, but every moment was worth it when I finally laid eyes on the towering peaks surrounding this beautiful valley.

Waking up this morning to the crisp mountain air was an experience in itself. The sky was painted in shades of pink and orange as the sun rose behind the Karakoram range. I stood there for what felt like hours, just taking it all in.

We visited the Shangrila Resort and the famous Lower Kachura Lake. The water was so clear and calm that it perfectly reflected the mountains like a giant mirror. I took countless photos, but none of them could truly capture the majesty of this place.

Tomorrow we're planning to visit Shigar Fort and maybe explore some of the nearby valleys. I can't wait to see what else this region has to offer. This trip has already
